

The Photograph

James: lyrics.
James: guitar, low whistle, vocal.
Nigel: strings.

As I stood to take this photograph of reflections in a pond I saw the beauty in the clouds and every branch and frond I only noticed later on the thing that made me frown ... a metaphor that symbolises life turned upside down

As I look upon this photograph and contemplate that scene I find that it is drawing me to how things might have been The way that things have changed of late the stuff they've messed around accumulate together to a world turned upside down

My world has changed in so many ways
Been marking time for too many days
I just want to go back to how things were before it all turned upside down

If I'm asked about that photograph and if it has changed my life I have to answer yes it has but like a double edged knife It was taken at my safe place where I go to restore my mind but when I picked up on that metaphor I felt it all had been maligned

Been marking time for too many days
I just want to go back to how things were
before it all turned upside down
